

THE GOLD EDIT

16 February 2015

Year Of The What?

2015. The Chinese Year of the Sheep / Goat / Ram - the exact species of the creature is debatable. Referred to as 'Yang' in Chinese, the title encompasses all 3 animals, so your chosen representative for the year really is up to you. Whatever your preference, choose to welcome in the new year with a slick, gimmick-free piece of fine jewellery. Take your pick from the two labels I believe are leading the way in creating highly desirable celebratory keepsakes.

For The Hands:

Appeal to your inner child & stack fingers with Lauren X Khoo's zodiac-inspired rings. The sherbet coloured creations are delicately formed in 18 karat gold and plated in sugary hues of coloured carbon; each ring features an animal, all of which appear to balance circus-like atop the hoop of the ring. Injecting the collection with a sense of humour, the creatures are sculpted to look like miniature balloon animals; giving the traditional representatives of the zodiac a fun and refreshing makeover. The limited-edition collection is available from April, exclusive to Fivestory, New York.

About Me

Kate Turton

Kate Turton is a jewellery blogger based in the UK.

Her previous experience includes careers in buying & reporting on international fashion week trends. In 2013 she won the title of BDC New Designer of the Year and is currently working freelance as a creative consultant.

View my complete profile

Follow

Blog Archive

▼ 2015 (16)

▼ February (8)

Jewellery Lessons From: Marni Resort 2015

New York Fashion Week: Street Style Jewellery

Spring 2015 Capsule Wardrobe

Year Of The What?

Spring Into Action

Earn Your Stripes

Ganni X Sophie Bille Brahe

All Choked Up

► January (8)

Search This Blog